

International Regulatory Compliance

You operate as part of a global supply chain. In a growing global market. Issues that require your attention can happen anywhere, at any time.

Our international reach helps clients quickly respond to regulatory issues that transcend national borders. Our globally positioned lawyers and regulatory affairs specialists provide clients with counseling, document drafting and representation, and regulatory compliance. They also closely monitor developments in the European Commission, Council, and Parliament as well as initiatives of member country lawmakers and regulators.

We keep clients up to the minute on food safety law developments and new requirements for labeling and traceability of foods and food components derived from biotechnology.

Through this constant watch and the experience of our lawyers, which include the former EU ambassador to the United States, as well as a former U.S. trade representative and former secretary of the USDA, we act quickly when a client needs representation or advice regarding international food safety legislation.

Although much of our international work necessarily focuses on the EU, Canada, and Mexico, our lawyers and offices throughout the world are accustomed to providing similar counsel in Japan, China, Brazil, and Argentina.

Contacts

Martin J. Hahn,
Washington, D.C.

Gary Jay Kushner,
Washington, D.C.

Richard Welfare,
London

Thomas Salomon, LL.M.
(Illinois),
Hamburg

Jacqueline Mailly,
Brussels

---

Practices

Food Law

Crisis Leadership Team

---

Representative experience

Advised the U.S. poultry industry during successful negotiation of a U.S.-Russia agreement on market access for U.S. chicken.

Convinced the Japanese government to conduct a science-based review of a proposed feed additive regulation and to not restrict imports of U.S. meat products treated with antibiotic feed additives.

Succeeded in persuading the U.S. International Trade Commission that imports of greenhouse tomatoes from Canada were not causing or threatening material injury to the U.S. industry.

Advise leading U.S. and international food companies on cutting-edge trade issues, including U.S. sugar and peanut quotas, dairy trade, U.S. imports of milk protein concentrate, biotechnology regulation, etc.

Latest thinking and events

Analysis

FDA issues final rule on records required to support “Gluten-Free” claim on fermented or hydrolyzed food

News

Rethinking recyclable packaging claims in an evolving litigation landscape

News

FDA announces additional flexibility for new nutrition labeling requirements

News

California update: OEHHA extends comment period

News

NOP issues proposed rule amending organic requirements to strengthen organic enforcement

News

FDA issues first injunction under Produce Safety Rule